

The Citadel in Haiti.

A delegation with the Haiti Support Project met with President Rene Prival Oct. 12 at the end of a 5-day cultural pilgrimage to Haiti. The President encouraged the group to continue work to move Haiti forward and thanked them for their efforts to support his country. President Prival said conditions in Haiti have improved greatly and the country is open for business and partnerships. Black Americans and Haitians in the diaspora were urged to take advantage of the significant opportunities.

A Pilgrimage to Haiti

Regine Alexandre, of USAID, offered a presentation on the American agency's work in Haiti and tourism and other opportunities during its stay in Cap Hatien.

(L-r) Ron Daniels, Warren Ballentine, Representative Gregory Meeks, Kangol Kid and George Frasier, Black Business advocate.

Haitian art created by the people.

President Prival and rapper Kangol Kid.

The delegation with the Haiti Support Project enjoyed lunch at the Sugarcane Museum in Port Au Prince before a flight to tour historical sites in Cap Hatien, in northern Haiti.

School girls from the town of Milot.

A sacred voodoo site.

Photos by Richard B.
Muhammad